Dignified Healthcare

At Hospital Raymundo Garcia in Somotillo, Nicaragua, doctors spend 8 to 9 hours seated in a chair to perform up to 40 ultrasounds per day. Beyond aesthetics, operating with insufficient supplies and severely damaged furnishings creates an undignified and unsafe environment for the patient and doctor alike.

By improving conditions in the facilities that make up the country’s maternal-infant health network, Global Links enables professionals to provide high-quality care with fewer obstacles, leading to a safer, more positive healthcare experience for pregnant women and their children.
